CHEEKWOOD LAUNCHES NEW ART INITIATIVE WITH INTERNATIONALLY ACCLAIMED ARTIST BETH KATLEMAN

INTERVENTIONS: BETH KATLEMAN*
TO DEBUT SEPTEMBER 18

(Nashville, TN) - In the fall of this year, Cheekwood Estate & Gardens will launch its latest innovative arts initiative focused on activating the Historic Mansion & Museum's period rooms with the exhibit Interventions: Beth Katleman. Intended to enliven a historic environment, this program, in its inaugural year, will feature artist Beth Katleman. This new initiative aims to create a complementary dialogue between the craftsmanship of the creative contemporary minds of today and the classical collections present within the Cheekwood mansion. It will begin September 18 and will run through January 9, 2022.

Katleman, will install her whimsical and satirical work offering a creative temporary shift in perspective on the museum's permanent collection. She derives her inspiration from eighteenth century Chippendale designs and traditional toile patterns to fabricate intricate installations made of porcelain. Interlaced with charming classical references and satirical dark humor, her work places a quirky twist on the popular designs of the past. Casts are made from flea market trinkets in white porcelain and arranged into ornate configurations that create allegories referenced from pop culture, fairytales and classical literature.

"As a highly unique program and opportunity for contemporary minds to install their works alongside historic museum collections in an authentic period room environment, this is a practice rarely attempted in historic American houses," says Katelyn Bennett, Curator of Furniture, Decorative Arts and Architecture at Cheekwood. "The practice of marrying dynamic yet harmonious artforms within period rooms is a nontraditional initiative presenting Cheekwood with an exciting opportunity."

Working from her Brooklyn studio, Beth Katleman has made headlines for her elaborate and eye-catching work worldwide and has caught the attention of designers, collectors, and curators alike after having shown at Art Basel and New York's Winter Antiques Show. She has received commissions from leading designers like Christian Dior and has installed works across the globe spanning London, Hong Kong, New South Wales, Australia, and recently Limoges, France.
